It is fine; it makes the Bible easy to understand. Leave orders with E. Myers, the shoe repair shop, Ironton, Mo.

Through the kindness of my friend, Mr. Charles L. Harris of Sabula, I am in receipt of a book which has given me no little pleasure—"Some Things of Men I Have Known." It is the work of Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, of grateful memory to all true Democrats. My thanks are due, and are hereby gratefully tendered, to Mr. Harris.

Miss Rebecca Wick, daughter of Dr. J. W. Wick, whose summer home is one of the beauty spots of the valley, is expected to visit friends the latter part of April. Miss Rebecca is a vocalist of marked ability and her old friends and acquaintances will be glad to know that she will give a recital at the opera house on or about April 28th.

The Civil Service examination held at this place on March 6th was attended by eighteen would-be postmasters. There were nine from Ellington, four from Bunker, three from Centerville, two from Corridon. The examination was conducted by a Supervisor sent here for that purpose by the Civil Service Commission.—Reynolds Outlook.

A week ago last Sunday, Pearl, the three-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Martin, while running across the room, fell and ran a pair of scissors through her cheek and penetrating the ear canal. The little one was taken to a specialist in St. Louis but an examination revealed nothing serious. She is doing nicely and promises soon to be fully recovered.

Judge Walker was stricken with a chill, while trying a case, at Bloomfield, on Wednesday afternoon of last week, and had to vacate the bench. Petitions addressed to the county court, asking the calling of a local option election, are being circulated throughout the county. The petitions will be presented to the court April 8th and it is probable an election will be ordered for some time in May. The last local option election in Iron County was held October 5, 1907. The cost thereof to the county was $381.50. The majority for the wets was 24.

We had a snow storm last Thursday and that night the thermometer went down to zero. The Sunday previous eighty was recorded. Quite a change in four days. Friday it warmed up, though, and the snow soon melted. Mr. Delano says that in the 37 years he has been keeping the weather record in the valley this is the first time zero has ever been recorded in March. He says look out for killing frosts in May.

Some fellow, who does not furnish his name, writes the REGISTER that there is boot legging going on in Ironton. He declares that physicians are writing prescriptions for whiskey where it is not needed as medicine. In fact, the writer makes all sorts of charges and counter charges. If he has the faith of his convictions and will give us his name for publication we will take pleasure in printing his communication.

Dr. J. H. Martin of Pilot Knob tells us that while he was in St. Louis last week he called on the railroad officials to learn what progress was being made on the promised railroad station at Pilot Knob. He was shown the blue print of the proposed structure, was told that the contract for the building had been let, and that it would be hurried to completion. The station house is to be of the pagoda style of architecture.

At the school election to be held in the Ironton district Tuesday, April 7th, two directors are to be chosen to succeed C. P. Damron and R. E. Rudy, whose terms expire. A proposition will also be submitted to the voters to make the tax levy for school purposes 65 cents on the hundred dollars valuation for the ensuing year. The members of the board say this levy is necessary to maintain the school as at present conducted.

Burke and Hobbs who are to hold a revival here in June have left Ironton where their success was marvelous and have gone to St. Louis where they are holding services at the Lafayette Park Methodist Church. The same strange and wonderful success has followed them there in their revival services and it is expected that they may be held there constantly until their engagement here calls them away. The spirit of their success is wonderful and the active members of their committees are locally very active in making arrangements for their visit here in June. A leading member of the building committee told a Lead Belt News man yesterday that a tabernacle of substantial quality would be erected without doubt and that it probably would be placed at the most central point procurable.—Lead Belt News.

Rev. W. A. Tetley in his services at the Methodist Church Sunday morning strongly advocated a co-operative revival effort on the part of the local protestant churches. The matter has been considerably agitated since, many wanting to secure Burke and Hobbs who are holding such a wonderful meeting at Ironton. They will go from there to Flat River and many think they can be brought here after that time.—Fredericktown Democrat-News.

A dispatch from Jefferson City to the St. Louis Republic says that the Game and Fish Department is making preparations for an active campaign against unlawful fishing after April 1. Under the law it is illegal to fish in any manner in Missouri, save with the hook and line and with trot line, during April, May and June—the spawning season for game and other varieties of fish. Fines for violation of this law range from $50 to $300.—De Soto Press.

Dr. James H. Martin of Pilot Knob is the first candidate to announce for county office. He seeks the nomination for Representative. Dr. Martin has twice been elected to this important position and proved himself a faithful and conscientious official. He promises the people that should he again be favored he will give the duties of the office the same careful consideration in the future that he has in the past. On this platform he seeks another term.

Mrs. Woodside was in St. Louis again the first of the week selecting stock for her millinery opening which will be held Thursday, March 26, from 7:30 to 10 o'clock P. M. Mrs. Curtis is here from Sikeston assisting Mrs. Woodside in arranging for the opening and undoubtedly one of the handsomest displays of Spring Millinery ever seen in the Valley will be on display on this occasion. Don't forget the date. Everyone cordially invited. Especially the ladies.

We spied a curiosity on a wagon here Monday and on a closer investigation found George Davault with two cotton scrapers and 500 pounds of cotton seed he is going to plant this spring. He made some thing over $27 per acre on four acres of cotton which he raised last year. Those who have experimented with it say the soil in Bollinger county is well adapted to growing cotton and will yield a larger profit than most any other crop.—Lutesville Banner.

The following verses were written by Sallie Dunn of Sabula in commemoration of her eighty-second birthday, some two weeks ago: I have passed my fourscore and one, Glory to God and to His Son! And many a tiresome, weary day I have spent upon my earthly way. May I be numbered with the blest, And with them be at final rest! I now have passed full eighty-two, And here there's nothing good that I can do.

The time is drawing, drawing nigh When this body worn and frail must die. O, may I join that heavenly host—"Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost!"

Oliver Fox has returned from Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he accompanied his brother, George, who is in poor health. Ollie says that George improved considerably in the short time that he was with him there and he has since written that he continues to get better. We are glad to hear it and hope he will soon be restored to perfect health. While in Albuquerque Ollie met O. J. Buford, formerly of this county. Mr. Buford has been in New Mexico some time for the benefit of his health and is now in pretty fair condition. Mr. Buford expects to return to California in the near future.

To my long-time friend, Frank Scoville, of Corona, California, I am again indebted for a box of navel oranges, sweet, tender and of delicious flavor. When you put a section of the fruit in your mouth and close your eyes, you see Elysium in all its beauty, and drink in the fragrance of its celestial groves. Then just think of my self-denial! The box came two weeks ago, when the folks were at Hot Springs, and was unopened until their return last week. My reward is in enjoying its contents now. Mr. Scoville is at the head of a citrus fruit company and all his old friends here—and their number is co-extensive with those who knew him—rejoice in his welfare.

Redmond Black of Clayton's Creek was transacting business in Centerville Friday evening and Saturday last week. Mr. Black is a member of the Board of Directors of the Bismarck, Bellevue Valley & Western R. R., the proposed line from Bismarck to Bunker, and he informs us that there could be little doubt that the road would be built through to Bunker in a good deal less time than many people supposed. Mr. Black did not so inform us, but we have learned from other sources that he would probably be a candidate at the primary election in Iron county for the Democratic nomination for Collector. He was defeated for the nomination for this office four years ago by only four or five votes.—Reynolds Outlook.

The Bismarck Hotel was discovered on fire about 2:30 Saturday morning. The fire was discovered by J. C. Rudock, the night clerk, as he was taking a guest to his room. As they were going up stairs they smelt smoke, and young Rudock started to investigate. When he opened the doors leading to the dining room he found that room filled with smoke. Upon further investigation he found the floor of the kitchen to be on fire. He turned in an alarm and then awakened the proprietor and also aroused all the people who were stopping there.

Quite a number of our people responded to the alarm and a bucket brigade was formed. By hard work the blaze was put out after having done about $500 damages. The fire is supposed to have started in the basement, and was caused from the furnace. This has been the third fire for Bismarck in less than two weeks. Carpenters were at work the first part of the week putting in a new floor and repaired the damages, and everything is again in first class shape.—Bismarck Gazette.

A petition was filed with County Clerk Reyburn Monday asking the County Court to establish a special road district to be known as the Glover Special Road District. The proposed road runs from Glover, 11 miles south of Ironton, on the Iron Mountain Railroad to the Reynolds county line, thence to Centerville. It is about four miles from Glover to the county line and fifteen miles from there to Centerville. Reynolds county people, it is said, have already subscribed $1,000 to help build the road. This is the road Mr. Fred T. Hunt has been working for and it is proposed to bridge Black river at or near his farm. A number of railroad officials were at Glover Sunday in a private car where they met by an appointment of a number of people from Iron and Reynolds counties who want a depot established at Glover. The officials told their petitioners that they would put a car in at Glover to be used as a station house, and, after a trial of several months, if the business justified it, the company would gladly put up a building at Glover.

Ever since the close of the big Burk-Hobbs meeting there has been dissension in the ranks of the Southern Methodists in the valley. The pastor, Rev. Vaughan, has abandoned the church on Fort Hill, and has been holding services in the tabernacle in south Ironton, built for the revivalists. This doesn't suit the Arcadia members of the congregation and for several weeks there has been considerable discussion, pro and con, and not a little feeling developed. Finally the Arcadia adherents resorted to "poetry" to relieve the tension and sometime during Saturday the following effusions—one of them set to music—were liberally scattered throughout the valley:

YOU SHALL NOT MOVE FORT HILL CHURCH. When Fort Hill Church was built, But few were here who know; Our dear old fathers did that job. Some fifty years ago.

My mother said I'd meet there, My father held my hand; While he strength and mind to act, I'd tell that old church stand. I went to Sunday School, Before I had a shoe; The thorns and thistles scratch'd my feet. Now move that church dare you? My sweetheart held my arm, We went there "on the lark;" Before the pastor "sprung the light," I squeezed her in the back.

My parents now are dead, We held their funeral there; While I am able to resist, You'll move that church no where!

BY ONE WHO MOURNS. There was peace in our pleasant valley, Our hearts were filled with love, And our lives were full of blessings, Sent to us from Him above. But now our hearts are saddened, And our brain is full of gloom, We strive to cheer our souls, Since our pastor flew the coop. And we're grown weary waiting, Longing for him to come home, But we know he will not get on, On a rolling, restless sea. We are weary, weary waiting, Hoping he will soon be here, For there is nothing here but sadness, Since our pastor flew the coop. And we've got the feast all ready, And we've killed the fatted calf, Everyone is ready waiting, And we won't do things by half! When he comes we'll shout, We'll sing, our horns we'll too, And we'll whisper to him gently, "Stay with us, don't fly the coop."

Early Tuesday morning Sheriff Blue received word that the post-office at Middlebrook and J. Baltisier's store at Pilot Knob had been burglarized the night before. The message from Middlebrook said that two strange negroes had been seen in the village Monday evening and the supposition was they were the burglars. The Sheriff concluded that the jobs at Middlebrook and Pilot Knob were done by the same parties. He at once departed for Middlebrook and dispatched Deputy George W. Marshall to Arcadia to ascertain if any negroes had passed down the railroad. On arriving at the Arcadia station Mr. Marshall learned that two negroes had been there a short time before and gone south. The official started in pursuit. About a mile below Arcadia, he saw a negro walking the track about a hundred yards in front of him. Mr. Marshall left the track, went through the woods, took the negro unawares and, presenting a gun, commanded him to surrender. The negro offered no resistance and the officer started back to Ironton with his prisoner. They had proceeded some distance, when the negro suddenly whirled, at the same time pulling a gun from his pocket, which he fired at his captor. The official returned the fire, and then the two men grappled. The negro succeeded in getting the officer's gun away from him and fired another shot. Mr. Marshall lost consciousness and the negro fled. Just about the time Marshall discovered the negro on the track in front of him he met Geo. Stark, who lives near by, and to whom he told his mission. Shortly afterwards Stark heard the shots fired, and, after waiting a little while and Marshall failing to return, he started to investigate. After proceeding some distance he discovered the officer lying by the side of the track unconscious and the blood streaming from two ugly wounds in the back of his head. The injured man was soon revived and Mr. Stark brought him to town in his buggy. The announcement that George Marshall had been shot by a negro caused much excitement and a posse was quickly armed and started in pursuit. The woods were scoured from here to Hogan, but the fugitive could not be found. About noon Sheriff Blue took in custody a negro at the Arcadia station. At first he vigorously denied having anything to do with the burglaries at Middlebrook and Pilot Knob but when Mr. Baltisier declared the new overalls and shoes that he wore were of the same brand as those taken from his store the negro weakened. But when he was taken before George Marshall the latter promptly declared he was not the negro with whom he had had the trouble. Dr. Marshall, after making an examination, said that the officer's wounds were not from gun shots, that the negro had probably struck him in the back of the head with a heavy gun. While painfully injured, Mr. Marshall promises to soon recover. It was a lucky escape. The negro probably thought he had killed him. But little of value was secured from the post-office at Middlebrook. Some overalls and shoes and $7 in cash were taken from the store at Pilot Knob. Search is still being made for the missing negro and it is hoped he will be apprehended to-day (Wednesday).

John Newman.

Died—At his residence, Ironton, Mo., Friday, March 20, 1914, at 5:45 A. M., John Newman, aged 73 years, 9 months and 27 days.

The subject of this memoir was born at Tring, England, and in his nineteenth year came to America. He was one of a family of eight, all of whom emigrated from the ancestral home to seek their fortunes in the new world. They located in Ironton and here still reside the surviving members of the family. The parents, Wm. Newman and wife, and the brothers, Thomas and William B., were called to rest in the passing years, and there survive three sisters—Mrs. S. T. Gay, Mrs. Wm. Farmer and Mrs. Wm. Hills.

Mr. John Newman's avocation was that of market gardener, which he began in 1886 and continued until within the past two years. For thirty years, it is said, he never missed a Friday in driving to Iron Mountain with his huckster wagon, and he retained the respect and good-will of his customers to the end.

In 1871 he took unto himself a wife and with her he lived happily until her death, which occurred five years ago. She was aunt to Dr. I. A. Marshall, and at the death of his wife took the place of a mother to their infant daughter, Irene, now a young lady, and did her assumed duty with zealous care.

John Newman was a man of the strictest integrity, with a heart that beat lovingly to his fellow-men. He was truly a Christian in the dearest sense the term implies—good-will and unselfish endeavor conjoined to make him such. He became a member of the Presbyterian church in 1873, and his life was consistent with his profession. In his later years his heart turned to the land of his birth, and at every family gathering his delight was to recall the scenes of his childhood and youth, though with no abatement of the love he bore the newer home, and the friends about him. I knew him, and knew him well, all those fifty-odd years, and feel that one more kindly spirit has been added to the innumerable caravan that has gone before.
